

Independent Study Title	The Adoption of Temple, School and Home Concept for Community Development in Tambon Don Kaew, Amphoe Mae Rim, Changwat Chiang Mai
Author	Phrabaideka Charoensak Ueangkhiaw
Degree	Master of Arts (Political Science)
Independent Study Advisor	Assoc. Prof. Dr. Tanet Charoenmaung

Abstract

The objectives of The Adaptation The Principle “Bor Worn” (temple, home and school) for Community Development, Don Kaew sub-district, Mae Rim district, Chiang Mai Province; to study the adaptation the principle “Bor Worn” (temple, home and school) for community development is success or failure, to study and analyst the factors of success or failure which concern the principle “Bor Worn” (temple, home and school) and can be used in other places by quality research process. The methodology is the reviewing the concerned document and interviewing with the key-person of Don Kaew sub-district who are the formal leaders, abbots, the principal of the school and people in Don Kaew sub-district who are the agent in each career group.

The result of this study found that the adaptation the principle “Bor Worn” (temple, home and school) for community development, Don Kaew sub-district is successful. The factors that support the success; the high quality people especially, the leaders, high participatory level of people, service mind and public mind and the supporting of local administrative organization (Don Kaew sub-district administrative organization)

However, the problem and obstacle of the adaptation the principle “Bor Worn” (temple, home and school) for community development, Don Kaew sub-district is the expansion of city and build the residence that makes the new people group who come from other places. They lack of conscious to take care of community, lack of service mind to have participatory with community and the people familiar with the public service. That makes the people are not alert to help each other for strength community development.

ลิขสิทธิ์มหาวิทยาลัยเชียงใหม่
Copyright© by Chiang Mai University
All rights reserved