ABSTRACT

The objective of this independent study was to study opinions towards the Universal Health Program of doctors in Mueang District Samut Sakhon Province. The instrument was a questionnaire, asking information from 67 doctors. Data were analyzed by using descriptive statistics, percentage, mean and standard deviation.

The overall result indicated that the subjects disagreed with this program. The subjects also perceived that the program negatively affected themselves and hospitals.

Moreover, the subjects indicated that the program had many problems that should be improved immediately.

Their recommendations for this program were to allot suitable budget and personnel, and encourage people to take more preventive measures.
