ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This dissertation would not have been possible unless I was not fortunate enough to meet many people who have been a part of my PhD journey.

First and foremost, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my thesis supervisor, Professor Dr. Michael McAleer, Professor of Quantitative Finance, Econometric Institute, Erasmus School of Economics, Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands and Research Fellow, Tinbergen Institute, The Netherlands and Distinguished Chair Professor, College of Social Science and Management, National Chung Hsing University, Taichung, Taiwan and Visiting Professor Institute of Economic Research, Kyoto University, Kyoto, Japan. His crucial contributions have made him the back bone of this dissertation. In addition, he has exceptionally inspired and enriched my intellectual maturity as an economist through his wide knowledge and logical way of thinking. Throughout my writing on three academic papers, he provided me absolute understanding, motivation, enthusiasm, unflinching encouragement, continuous support, and boundless patience. I would have been lost without his guidance, untiring help and good company during my difficult moments. I also wish to express my greatest appreciation to my co-supervisor, Associate Professor Dr. Chia-Lin Chang of National Chung Hsing University, Taiwan, for her devotion of time, effort, and incredible support in a number of ways. Her understanding, encouraging, sound advices have been of great value. She is perceptive and mindful of the things that truly matters. I would like to express my deepest appreciation to her on generously accompanying me when I was suffering tremendously from some emotional setback.

I owe my most sincere gratitude to the Chairperson of my thesis examining committee, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Coenraad Labuschagne of University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa, who graciously agreed to be the external examiner, and has made available his continued and growing support and encouragement in many different important ways. I have furthermore to sincerely thank my thesis advisory committee, Asst. Prof. Dr. Pairat Kanjanakaroon, Prof. Dr. Peter Hollis Calkins, Lect. Dr. Prapatchon Jariyapan, and Asst. Prof. Dr. Piyaluk Buddhawongsa, for their time and truly invaluable help and insightful comments on tracking the writing and the development of this dissertation in the final stage.

My work greatly improved thanks to the comments of the anonymous reviewers and editors of the articles published with contribution of this dissertation. I gratefully acknowledge the generous financial support from the Office of Higher Education Commission, Ministry of Education, Thailand, for a CHE-PhD 2550 scholarship.

Plenty of people has kept me sane and offered me the wonderful friendship.

Among many others, I am indebted to many of my colleagues at Maejo University for providing a stimulating and fun environment in which to learn and grow. Also my sincere thanks go to my friends in Chiang Mai University for our hard working experiences and for all the fun we had been together. I offer my regards and blessings to all of those who supported me in any respect during the completion of the study, namely Ravee Phoewhawm, who has provided assistance in grammatical correction on my English language writing. He deserves a special mention. I wish to extend my warmest thanks to the administration staffs, secretaries, librarians in the Faculty of Economics, Chiang Mai University, for their hospitality and assisting me in various ways.

Lastly, and most importantly, I am forever indebted to my parents for their unflagging love and company, continued, spiritual and moral support, especially for many sleepless nights when I encountered difficulties and suffers, throughout my life. Their advices were consistently timely and useful. I have no suitable words that can fully describe their everlasting love to me. I owe my loving thanks to the very special person who is my shadow and my light. He has understood, encouraged, provided me his highly valued support and endless patience at every moment of my life, especially when I was on peak of stress in desperate time. My PhD journey has been long and full of obstacles and barriers. I could never have got through without their support. To them I dedicate this thesis. I am responsible for any mistaken, incorrect elements that this dissertation may have.
