ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This work would not have been possible without the support and encouragement of my advisor, Prof. Dr. Songsak Sriboonchitta, and my co-advisor, Prof. Dr. Wan Tran Huang, who both supported and encouraged me throughout my academic program. I similarly express my gratitude to Lecturers Pakinee Ariya and Chalermpon Kongjit, whose valuable insights and comments helped me overcome several difficulties. I am also highly grateful to the other members of the examining committee—Prof. Dr. Aree Wiboonpongse, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Kanchana Chokethaworm, and Chairperson Prof. Dr. Shih Ti Yu—for lending support and sharing their comments regarding my study.

My sincere gratitude similarly goes to all my friends, for their help and encouragement throughout my four-year study at the Faculty of Economics at ChiangMai University.

Finally, I send my deepest appreciation to my beloved parents, who have unceasingly supported me, and who look forward to my completion of my PhD program.
